Sickening Sell-Outs!

60 Senators Throw U.S. Economy Under The Bus... Your Portfolio's Next

Dick Morris

Dear Fellow American,

On a cold Christmas Eve that will live forever in the annals of betrayal, the Senate voted 60 to 39 to seize ownership of the U.S. healthcare system ... and sell your financial future down the river.

My friend, if I didn't see it happening, I wouldn't believe it. But here it is: a national economic catastrophe rushing straight at those of us who work, save and invest. And there isn't much time left to protect your money ...

Consider this: in the face of 7 million lost jobs, double-digit unemployment and budget deficits guaranteed to stay above $1 trillion indefinitely ... Obama's party will now slither behind closed doors (with Rah Emanuel in charge) to secretly fill in the fine print of the most costly government entitlement program in U.S. history and then shove it down our throats.

What we are witnessing is an economic policy that seems INTENDED to wreak havoc on the U.S. economy and financial markets.

Indeed, the only way to fund the ObamaCare, monstrosity will be to print money at unprecedented rates, run up gigantic deficits and keep raising taxes on "the rich"... the precise opposite of what an economy in deep recession needs to recover.

So, instead of improving the economy, the situation's only going to get worse.

Once the Obama administration cranks up the printing press, we're doomed. It's almost a certainty we'll see hyperinflation and economic chaos ... worse yet, the possibility of another stock market meltdown looms.

And just when you thought it couldn't get any worse ... Obama's now talking about a SECOND stimulus package ... to be added to the already $800 billion that hasn't done a single positive thing for the economy.

The writing's on the wall. You must act now to protect your financial well-being. Hyperinflation is murder on the markets, and merciless to your savings. It erodes your buying power on a daily basis.

Wealth that took years to build bleeds away before your eyes.

But one of the smartest investment experts I know, Nicholas Vardy, points out that investors can still do just fine during periods of hyperinflation. Just like they did when hyperinflation gripped the country during the Jimmy Carter years.

They accomplished these gains by positioning their money in investments uncorrelated to the hemorrhaging Carter stock market ... and by insulating their portfolios with investments that were leveraged by inflation.

In other words, inflation made money for them. And here's the good news for you. Such investments exist today.

Vardy advises: As Obama spends us to record levels of hyperinflation, topping the disastrous Carter era, "buy and hold" will be financial suicide for your portfolio. But he adds: "No matter what the state of the financial markets, there is always a strategy out there that can make you money."

Nicholas, an American based in London, can back it up, too. Remember those awful months of September, October, and November 2008 -- especially, the bloody week of October 6? The DOW crashed to the tune of minus 17%.

That same week Vardy's Global Stock Investor portfolio made money. How was that possible? Vardy's investments were strategically "uncorrelated" to the overall stock market. Very likely, that was the only way to make money -- possibly in the world -- that week. And Nicholas Vardy made money for his investors.

That's the Vardy strategy. Seize opportunities wherever they may be. Let go of strategies that worked during the Great Bull Market of the 1980s and 1990s -- and position your money for the Hyperinflation Market of the Obama years. There will be gains to be made. And Nicholas will make sure you're in on them.

I follow Vardy's advice closely and admire his economic and investment insights. Full disclosure: I receive a percentage of each Global Stock Investor subscription sold, but I wouldn't do this if I did not believe in his abilities.

Remember, when Obama's $800 billion stimulus farce and projected $1.8 trillion deficit trigger the inevitable "Category 5" hyperinflation hurricane -- markets may well tank to record lows ... exceeding those of the last crash.

Don't believe the current "false recovery." If your financial advisor (or your Obama-worshipping brother-in-law) advises you to get back into regular mutual funds -- beware.

Instead, be smart. Try the brilliant investing strategies in Nicholas Vardy's Global Stock Investor. Don't let Obama's hyperinflation bleed your money away. You worked too long and hard to earn it. I urge you to give Vardy a try. Click here to learn more.
